Students have valuable insights into classroom teaching and how it might be improved. After all, no one observes us more than they do.

The only direct, daily observers of a professor's classroom teaching performance are the students in the classroom. Students are thus a potentially valuable source of information about their professors' teaching. Student Feedback is an essential part of learning, especially when we want to improve our practice and attain high professional standards.

To help faculty members hone their performance is nothing more than a logical extension of this expectation. Just as students need feedback and guidance to correct errors, faculty members require feedback and helpful direction if they have to improve their performance. The process of student's feedback is as follows:

Preparation of students feedback sheet:

1. Respective class coordinators prepare the students feedback sheet (Faculty-subject-wise) with ERP coordinator on ERP with the discussion with Academic coordinator and Director.
2. Student's feedback sheet includes 10 to 12 evaluation parameters on which students are going to judge Faculties through rating scale on ERP. This Feedback form is allowed to fill for a stipulated time, after which students responses are freeze.

Collection of Feedback Forms:

3. After completion of syllabus, ERP coordinators allow the feedback form to be filled by student on student's ERP then one research faculty make analysis of the collected forms. Preparation of analysis is faculty-subject wise.

Call for meeting:

4. Academic coordinator calls the meeting for the discussion of student's feedback.
5. Those faculties have satisfactorily feedback about their respective subjects, these faculties appreciated by the Director and those who have unsatisfactorily feedback, the Director discuss to that faculty member and take a remark.
